Rehan Babar's Race For Literacy

Pakistan faces huge problems with illiteracy among its people and more worryingly for its future development. 2.4 million children have no access to basic primary education, a mere 30% of the population is considered literate many of them can only sign their own name. I've always believed that providing the children of Pakistan with quality education is the only sustainable solution that can deliver the people and the country at large their best chance of building a brighter future. This belief was ingrained early on through my late mother, Neelofar Huma, who always stressed the importance of education and she worked hard to ensure that her children acquired it.

To honour her memory, and to address this, most pressing of challenges Pakistan faces, I've set myself the goal of raising enough funds to build a primary school in Khanewal (near Lahore) in Pakistan to be called 'The Huma Foundation Campus' this will be built and run by the renowned not-for-profit organisation 'The Citizens Foundation' (TCF).

Aim of the Project

- Raise GBP £55,000 (inc land, building, construction furniture, utilities and initial supplies)

Fundraising Plan

- Run 26.2 miles in the 2007 London Marathon
- Donate proceeds from my album "Dil da Chayn"

How you can help

- Sponsoring my marathon run
- Purchasing my album
- Raising funds on my behalf

To date TCF have built 311 primary and secondary schools across Pakistan and are providing nearly 40,000 children with an education. Its purpose- built schools with a well developed curriculum and a very effective system of monitoring and evaluation ensures that the children attending the schools are provided with the highest standard of education. TCF's long terms goal is to build 1,000 schools across Pakistan and to eventually provide a high standard of education to over 350,000 children.
